Nass-bridge. The male prisoner had been in the civil service of the Irish Government, and lived on a cetiring pension with his mother and Mr. Cof tey. Some difference soon took place between Coffey and Macloughlin respecting property, and Mrs. Coffey, it appeared, had taken part with her son: Coffey was much addicted to liquor. Coffey was much addicted to liquor. On the evening of the 13th of October, he was brought hobe in a state of in toxication, having fallen into a ditch in the neighbourhood of his house. Next morning he was found by a maid-servant lying on the floor of his bed-room, covered with blood, and his skull fractured. He was quite diad.

We have no room for he evidence, which was of great length and entirely circumstantial.—There were strong grounds of suspicion against both prisoners, but the facts proved against Macloughlin were so decided that the jury returned a verdict of guidy with respect to him, and acquitted his mother.

Mr. Macloughlin had been for a long time known in Dublin as one of the most dashing young gentlemen in it: he held for some time a situation in the Treasury office of the Castle, and was distinguished at several of the pri-vate parties in that city, by his devot-ed attention to the ladies, with whom he was a great favourite, and not unfrequently their devoted champion. Mr. Macloughlin was particularly well known by his exploits on the fifteen a cres, being a celebrated shot, and a "man of honour," according to the duellist's interpretation of the word. It his not many years since this gentleman had a quarrel with Mr. O'Mears, respecting some ladies, whom he considered to have been insulted by that gentleman: a duel ensued, and Mr. Mecloughlin was wounded severely, and it was for some time apprehended mor But the unfortunate min was reserved for a different fate. He made no confession.

The following account of the execution is from the Morning Register :-NASS, April.—The execution was appointed at two o'clock.

The mother of Macloughlin, Mrs. ffry, who was discharged immedi-Coffey, who was discharged immediately after the trial, was permitted to visit her son on Friday, when the in terview between them was deeply af-fecting—She tottered into the cell. sobbing loudly, and crying out, "William, William, way poor William!"
Macloughlin ap packed, and shook her by the hand, saying, "It is all well, mother." The unfortunate wo man was so overcome by her feelings. that she swooned away, and was in aensible for a few minutes. On her recovery, the turnkey intimated that the time allowed for her visit had expired, when Macloughlin said. "Give me the last kiss, mother" He placed his lips upon her cheek, and then turned round, putting his handkerchief over his eyes. As she departed from the cell, he said, in rather a subdued tone. "Mother, may God Almighty forgive you!

At five minutes before two o'clock the convict left his cell, accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Esmond, the Rev. Mr. by the Rev. Mr. Esmont, the Rev. Mr. Dayle, & the Sheriff. In the room adjuining the drop, his irons were struck off, & hisarms were pinioned. During this time he prayed most earnesily, and appeared to be almost regardless of what was post mortem examination took place, with a view of ascertaining the situation of a ball which Mr. Macloughlin received in a duel with Mr. O'Meara on the 12th of January, 1822. They fought twice in this week, on Monday morning in the Phonin: Park, where they exchanged shots, and on the Saturday following sear Lord Charle most's demesne, when they fired two shots each, both being wounded on the second fire, Macloughlin seriously, and, as it was at the time supposed mortally, the ball having entered the right ilium, one inch below the crista. When Surgeon Kerin who attended

Mr. Macloughlin, came up, he found him standing, supported by his friend, Mr. Baily. At first the situation of the wound was uncertain, but it was soon ascertained by the gushing of blood from histrowsers. He was then Laid on the ground, and the wound ex-amined. The surgeon was able to introduce his finger to its fullest extent. into the wound; feeling the edge of the bone rough through which the ball had

Mr. Macloughlin asked if he was mertally wounded; the surgeon anone. Agein Macloughlin repeated the question, and the surgeon repeated the question, and the surgeon repeated his suswer. I requested the patient to ask no more questions. At this time Macloughlin was aware that his antagonist had been wounded, and ha sudded, "Where has Mr. O'Mears been hit?' Some person in the crowd answered, "In the Name place."— Then Macloughlin, in a tone and man

JUVENILE PHILOSOPHY. Walking the other day in the street, we saw a little fellow fall on his face on the pavement, on which he roared most lustily. Running to pick him up, we wisely applied ourselves to cheer him with the comfortable consideration that he would be well to-morrow.

'Hoh, poh, my little man, don't cry, you will not mind it to-morrow.' Upon which the young sufferer, surely uncon scious of the sense and wit of his reply said, with a tear in his eye, and the cry of pain hardly for a moment repressed, Then I won't cry to-morrow. Swaim's Panacea For the cure of Scrofula or For the cure of Scrofula or Kings Evil, Syphilitic and Mercurial Dis-eases, Rheumatism, Ulcerous Sores-White Swellings, Diseases of the Liver and Skin, General Debility, &c. and all diseases arising from impure blood. It has also been found beneficial in Nervous and Dyspeptic complaints.

Price Two Dollars per bottle, and Twenty Dollars per Dozen. TO THE PUBLIC.

In consequence of the numerous frauds and impositions practised in reference to my medicine, I am again induced to change the form of my bot tles. In future, the Panacea will be put up in round bottles, fluted longitudinally, with the following works blown in the glass, "Swalm's Panses

-Philada."

These bottles are much stronger than those heretofore used, and will have but one label, which covers the cork, with my own signature on it, so that the cork cannot be drawn without destroying the signature, without which The medicine most none is genuire. The medicine most consequently be known to be genuire when my signature is visible; to counterfeit which, will be punishable as forgery.

The increasing demand for this celebrated medicine has enabled me to reduce the price to two dollars perbottle, thus bringing it within the reach of the indigent.

My panacea requires no encomium; its astonishing effects and wonderful peration, have drawn, both from Per tients and Medical Practitioners of the highest respectability, the most unquilified approvation, and established for it a character, which envy's pen, the dipped in gall, can never tarnish.
The false reports concerning this valuable medicine, which have been so diligently circulated by certain Physicians, have their origin either in envy or in the mischievous effects of the spurious imitations.

The Proprietor pledges himself to colemn assurances, that this medicine contains neither mercury, nor any ther deleterious drug.

The public are cautioned not to perchase my Panacea, except from myself, my accredited agents, or persons of known respectability, and all those will consequently be without excuse, who shall purchase from any other persons. Wm SWAIM. Philadelphia, Sept. 1828

MISCELLANY.

From the Lendon Magazine. school and school fellows.

Twelve years ago I made a mock Of filthy trades and traffics;
I wondered what they meant by stock,
I wrote delightful sapplics;
I knew the streets of Rome and Troy,
I supp'd with fates and furies;
Twelve years ago I was a boy,
A happy boy, at Drury's.

Twelve years ago!—how many a thought
Of faded pains and pleasures
Those whisper'd syllables have brought
From memory's hoarded treasures;
The fields, the forms, the bets, the books,
The glories and disgraces,
The voices of dear friends, the looks
Of old familiar faces.

Kind master smiles again to me, As bright as when we parted; I seem again the frank, the free,
Stout limb'd and simple hearted;
Pursuing ev'ry idle dream,
And shunning every warning;
With no hard work but Bovney Stream,
No chill except Long Morning.

Now stopping Harry Vernon's ball,
That rattled like a rocket;
Now bearing Wentworth's fourteen all,
And striking for the pocket;
Now feasting on a cheese and flitch,
Now drinking from the pewter;
Now leaping over Chalvey ditch,
Now laughing at my tutor.

Where are my friends? I am alone, No playmate shares my besker, Some lie beneath the churchyard stone, And some before the Speaker, And some compose a tragedy, And some compose a rondo; And some compose a rondo; And some draw sword for libert And some draw pleas for John Doe.

Tom Mill was used to blacken eyes, Without the fear of sessions;
Charles Medlar loath'd false quantities,
As much as false proressions;
Now Mill keeps order in the land, A magistrate pedantic; And Medlar's feet repose unscan'd, Beneath the wide Atlantic.

Wild Nick, whose oaths made such a din,
Does Dr. Martext's duty;
And Mullion, with that monstrous chin,
Is married to a beauty,
And Darrell studies, week by week,
His Mantand not his Manton;
And Ball, who was but seems to come he And Ball, who was but poor at Greek, Is very rich at Canton.

And I am eight and twenty now;
The world's cold chains have bound
And darker shades are on my brow,
And sadder scenes around me;
In Parliament I fill my seat,
With many other noodlees;
And lay my head in Jermyn-street,
And sip my hock at Doodle's.

But often when the cares of life But often when the cares of life
Have set my temples aching;
When visions haunt me of a wife,
When dunsawait my waking,
When lady Jane is in a pet,
Or Hoby in a hurry;
When captain Hazard wing a bet,
Or Beaulieu spoils a curry.

For hours and hours I think and talk Of each remembered hobby; I long to lounge in Poet's Walk, To shiver in the lobby; I wish that I could run away From house, and court, and levee, Where bearded men appear to day, Just Eaton boys, grown heavy.

That I could bask in childhoo d's sun, And and thuge wealth in one pound one,
And and huge wealth in one pound one,
Vast wit in broken noses;
And play Sir Giles at Dachet Lane,
And call the milk maids houris;
That I could be a boy again,
A happy boy, at Drury's.

Mr. Wells, of Detroit, writes to Dr. Mitchell of New York, that an eil has been extracted from Indian corn, the process for which the discoverer will not make known. The oil is said to be equal to Castor oil for a medicine, burns very bright in lamps, and may be made nice enough to cat on salad. It was discovered by accident in preparing mash for distillation.
